GIRLS FORCED TO DISROBE BY FAKE FEDERAL OFFICIAL

"Captain Marshall," with Room at Hotel Marlborough, Told Applicants for Secret-Service Jobs He Would Have to Take Measurements.

A special despatch from Washington tells for the first time of the startling conduct of a prominent New York architect who, by representing himself as a Secret-Service agent, lured a large number of pretty young women to a big Broadway hotel and there induced them to disrobe and submit to being measured with a tape line.

The story was to-day given out by Chief Wilkie of the Government's detective bureau, who says that under the name of "Captain Marshall" the architect advertised in local papers for "attractive young women, physically perfect, to become experts in the United States Secret Service." The applicants were requested, according to Wilkie's account, to report to "Captain Marshall" at the Hotel Marlborough

More than a hundred young women who believed that they met the physical requirements called on "Capt Marshall." They were invited to step into an adjoining room, remove their clothins and allow "Capt. Marshall" to measure them. Their scruples were lovercome by "the captain," who informed them that the rules of the secret service required absolutely that the physical measurements of women applicants be filed at Washington.

The landlady promptly wrote to Wilkie explaining that she kept a trical boarding-house and knew a for two.

The man owned up then. He said he was only 'out for a little fun."

For the sake of his wife and child he was let go after the United States District-Atorney had frightened him with threats of exposure and secured from him a solemn pledge never again to pose as a Government official. In the presence of his wife's brother and two of his own relatives he was required to sign an affidavit confessing the details of his escapade. The man is said to belong to several of the best clubs in town.
